The screenshot displays the PAPER Review Center interface. The top navigation bar includes the PAPER logo, a balance of 4850, a notification bell with one alert, a language dropdown set to English, and a user profile icon labeled BM. The main content area is titled "Review Center" and features a sidebar with icons for home, messages, submissions, calendar, and profile. The "Review Center" tab is active, showing a list of submissions with "Maya and the Robot" selected. The submission details for "Maya and the Robot" are shown, including a "Downloaded" status, a download button for the reviewed file with tutor comments, and a feedback summary. The feedback summary includes a tutor's comment: "Hi, Brittany! Your report is off to a nice start! I think you have done a great job describing Maya's character and the conflicts she has experienced in the story. This sets the reader up to be very curious to learn more about how the problems came to be and if she was able to solve them! To strengthen your report, can you give readers an idea of how Maya overcame her problems? Keep in mind that you do not want to spoil the story, but you want to give readers an idea of if/how Maya resolved the issues she was facing. You might share some of the character traits she used to solve her problems or give the readers an idea of who helped her out! For example, 'Through perseverance, a charming sense of humor, and a little help from his new puppy, Joe was able to find many friends at his new school!'". Below the feedback summary is a button to "Download reviewed file with tutor comments".

The bottom section of the screenshot shows the "Upload work for review" page. It includes a heading "Upload new work" and a description: "Our reviewers accept essays, creative writing, scientific writing, resumes, college admissions essays, and other writing projects." Below this is a large box with the text "Drag & drop file here or choose a file to upload" and two buttons: "Browse Files" and "Google Drive". A note below the buttons states: "All Google Docs, Google Spreadsheets, pdf, doc, docx, rtf, and txt file types are supported." The "Submission details" section follows, explaining that a tutor will review the submission and leave comments to help improve the draft. It also states that the comments will guide the student toward improving their content, argument, structure, and flow, as well as their grammar and spelling, and will also let them know if they've cited their sources properly. The form ends with a label "Title of your work:" and a text input field.

- Students need to submit details of the writing project or assignment.
- Usually the review will be available in about 20 hours.

Feedback Summary

Hi, Brittany! Your report is off to a nice start! I think you have done a great job describing Maya's character and the conflicts she has experienced in the story. This sets the reader up to be very curious to learn more about how the problems came to be and I felt you were able to make them clear.

To strengthen your report, can you give readers an idea of how Maya overcame her problems? Keep in mind that you do not want to spoil the story, but you want to give readers an idea of how Maya overcame the issues she was facing. You might share some of the character traits she used to solve her problems or give the readers an idea of who helped her. For example, "Through perseverance, in sharing some of her ideas, and a little help from her new puppy, she was able to find many friends at her new school."

I also encourage you to remember that commas support conjunctions that combine two independent clauses. Independent clauses can stand on their own like complete sentences. Using a comma to support these conjunctions helps you avoid run-on sentences. Can you use a comma to support conjunction words that combine independent clauses?

Separate independent clauses with commas. Maya then said,
